Abstract

We document a deterministic reconciliation pipeline over the four UK Gambling Commission public register tables (businesses, trading names, licensed activities, and declared domains) paired with 4,608 provider-disambiguated game identities across 144 studios, keeping provider headline RTP strictly separate from historical catalog references and installed operator configurations. Using method uk-source-ledger-1.0, the reconciled UK dataset links 2638 UKGC register businesses to 1280 casino/domain records, 2638 operator records, and 4482 disambiguated slot and table game identities across 144 providers.

1. Four-Table UKGC Licence Register Join & Domain Continuity Rules

The UKGC public register distributes licence state across businesses, trading names, activities, and domain declarations. Casimo joins all four tables daily, requires Remote + Casino + Active status within effective dates for the active register flag, retains historical businesses when a row disappears, and never infers UK-to-US game or operator availability.

2. Provider Headline RTP vs. Historical Catalog Reference

Across 4482 game records (12 with fresh provider-source captures and 4482 with verified artwork), provider headline RTP statements are stored separately from historical library references. Neither proves the RTP setting installed at a specific casino operator.
